Walt's View

High tunnels, community gardens springing up across the state

In order for West Virginia to continue expanding its movement toward more production of fresh, local, healthy foods throughout the calendar year, the construction of high tunnels and other indoor growing facilities is a must.

Right now a number of high tunnels supported by the WVDA have been completed or are being constructed for use this year including projects at Mount View High School in McDowell County, Rainelle Elementary School in Greenbrier County, Moorefield Middle School in Hardy County, Preston High School and the Mountaineer Challenge Academy in Preston County, Cortland Acres Nursing Home in Tucker County and the Charles Town-Ranson Garden Club in Jefferson County.

We intend to continue supporting these efforts and more like them in the future.

More and more we are also seeing the establishment of community gardens. At Valley Park in Putnam County, Highmark Blue Cross Blue Shield has invested in a new facility in addition to the one that opened in downtown Parkersburg last summer. The Modern Woodmen of America also just dedicated its garden spot in Kanawha City.

Many private farmers and organizations across West Virginia are also building and operating their own high tunnels and shared gardens. As I said before, the movement is on and growing.

Breaking the Sound Barrier

Sammy Steele, a deaf student at the West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and Blind in Romney works in the barn at Hampshire High School where he and other students from the WVSDDB are raising pigs, working in the greenhouse and fixing lawnmowers.

tractor and lawn mower motors in the classroom. In the afternoon, he's ready to hit the barn.

HHS gave the WVSDDB students three hogs to raise and room in their barn to care for them. When Sammy enters the barn on a typical day, he greets the pigs, makes sure they've got food and water, and then starts mucking out the pens. He works right alongside the agriculture education students from HHS.

"I think the HHS students appreciate the help," stresses Milliken. "I think it's been good for those students to see Sammy works just as hard as they do and it doesn't take any special treatment. He dives right in."

The pigs at the Hampshire High School (HHS) barn make quite a racket. Their loud 'oinks' and grunts don't bother Sammy Steele. The 19-year-old from McDowell County is deaf. He's a student at the nearby West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and Blind (WVSDDB).

Sammy is a regular at the barn. He, DaShawn Allen, a visually impaired student, and their Agriculture Education Instructor Veronica Milliken show up Monday through Friday from 1-3 p.m.

"They come up here every day and we clean the barn and watch the pigs grow. I think it's been an exciting process for them," says Milliken.

Sammy agrees.

"It was something new I wanted to try!" He communicates through sign language. Milliken interprets.

When Sammy arrived at the WVSDDB as a sophomore, he signed up for as many agriculture education classes as possible. Because the student-to-teacher ratio is much smaller than a typical school, Milliken says she's able to offer more individualized instruction.

Sammy works with her in the greenhouse in the morning and fixes

HONEYBEE HEALTH

Colony registration can help combat honeybee diseases

Today's concern with Colony Collapse Disorder (CCD) has increased public awareness of problems in the beekeeping industry. The consensus among experts is that a number of stressors are manifesting themselves in the decrease in productivity and health of honeybee colonies.

Primary among these stressors is the Varroa mite. Thought to be introduced to the United States from South America in the 1980's, this pest has decimated wild colonies. Without treatment, domesticated colonies also have been ravaged.

Today there is wide-ranging bee research ongoing and multiple approved treatments for mites, but control remains a challenge due to the mite's similarities with its host.

Making the Call

Auctioneer Donates Time to Raise Funds for FFA

“I’d always come up to the Daniel Boone Hotel and volunteer my time for the state Ham, Bacon and Egg Show and Sale. I’d carry the ham and bacon,” he explains. In the early 90s, Morrison decided to give auctioneering a go. “I practiced driving back and forth to work, going up and down the road learning to count. I had a gentleman tell me, ‘Before you can be an auctioneer, you have to learn how to count.’ Everybody thinks they know how to count but try counting in $5 increments to 100 then turn around and come back down. Then go to $2 increments. When you can do that, you can say you can count.”

Morrison received his West Virginia auctioneer’s license in 1996 and began to work regularly. “I’ll sell anything! From farm equipment, motorcycles, cars, boats, building materials, bull dozers, hydraulic hoses, whatever anybody brings in to sell, I’ll sell it.”

“The best part is the kids. They always thank me for what I’ve done. It makes me feel good,” Morrison says with a smile. “I get kind of silly up there. They call me the crazy guy.”

He especially enjoys doing auctions for FFA. “I’ve been going to Wetzel County and doing their Ham, Bacon and Egg auction for 18 years. Eighteen years in a row we’ve broke their total record. We had a $72,000 sale up there this spring!”

Spring is one of Morrison’s busiest times of year. “This makes the fourth auction I’ve done in the last five days,” speaking of the state Ham, Bacon and Egg Show and Sale held back on March 14 at the state Capitol. However he always makes time on his calendar for the annual event and several local auctions. This year the auctioneer donated his time to Wetzel and Cabell County Ham, Bacon and Egg sales, the state show, and he’s booked for Putnam County’s fall auction and an equipment auction for Cabell County.

“I never charge for a fundraiser. It’s always free.”

Morrison stresses it’s his way of giving back to a program that helped foster his dream.

“The best part is the kids. They always thank me for what I’ve done. It makes me feel good,” Morrison says with a smile. “I get kind of silly up there. They call me the crazy guy.”

At the 2016 state sale, despite a bad cold, Morrison pushed the bidding. The champion ham went for $6,600, the champion bacon for $1,470, and the champion eggs for $600. The final total on the night was $32,228. Most of that money goes back to the students for their next FFA project or a college fund.

If you’re interested in becoming a certified auctioneer, contact the WVDA at 304-558-3200 for more information.

Ron Morrison is a fast talker. “Who will give me one-fifty, one-fifty, one-fifty. I got one-fifty. Do I hear two-hundred...” He’s one of the most sought after auctioneers in West Virginia and for good reason. He gets results. That’s why he’s a favorite of FFA programs looking to sell everything from ham, bacon and eggs to farm equipment.

A cattle farmer by trade, Morrison knew from an early age what he wanted to do.

“Ever since I was a kid I went to the stock markets with my dad. He watched the cattle. I watched the auctioneer. I always thought I’d like to be one someday.”

As a teenager, Morrison joined FFA. His high school didn’t offer the Ham, Bacon and Egg program where members raise their own hogs and learn to slaughter, butcher and prepare the meat for sale. That didn’t stop him from taking part. He did the next best thing.

Left: The annual Greenbrier/Monroe Ham, Bacon & Egg Auction Brought in $108,000. The money goes back to the 4-H and FFA students who participated. Pictured are the grand champion and reserve champion winners. Beef Industry promotes its product

On June 1 at the Capitol Market in Charleston, Gov. Earl Ray Tomblin will join me and members of our state’s Beef Industry Council for the kickoff of this year’s Beef for Father’s Day promotion.

This event, and others like it that are being scheduled at various sites throughout the state during the first half of June, brings exposure to West Virginia’s beef operations and the top-quality product our farmers produce.

West Virginia’s cattle industry has remained one of our state’s most stable agricultural sectors throughout the years. The state’s cattle inventory is around 385,000 head, worth over $540 million. Another valuable aspect of the industry is it is present throughout the state, spreading its economic impact widely.

I encourage you to buy your beef from local farmers – along with as many other West Virginia Grown food products as you can.

For more information on the events slated for outside of Charleston you can check our website at www.agriculture.wv.gov

Rural Rehab loan assists Jefferson County market

Morgan’s Grove Market in Shepherdstown recently applied for and was granted a low-interest loan for a new facility through the Rural Rehabilitation Loan Program, designed to assist in the development of agriculture-related businesses.

This market has adopted a business model focused on providing local food for its customers with an emphasis on healthy living.

I was honored to join them for their recent grand opening (see photo) and I’m pleased to see that financial assistance is being made available to worthy businesses that have a sound plan for success in agri-businesses.

WVDA Accepting 2016 Women in Agriculture Nominations

Completed applications should be returned to:
 Cindy Shreve, WV Department of Agriculture,
 Moorefield Agricultural Complex, 60B Moorefield
 Industrial Park Rd., Moorefield, WV 26836 or sent to cshreve@wvda.us.

The West Virginia Department of Agriculture (WVDA) is seeking nominations for the 2016 "West Virginia Women in Agriculture" program. Nominations are due by June 15. Those making the nominations are asked to provide as much detail about the nominee's agricultural career as possible.

Induction is granted to those women who have made significant contributions to the establishment, development, advancement or improvement of West Virginia agriculture, forestry or specialty crops in the Mountain State. An inductee reception will be held at the 2016 State Fair of West Virginia, where the women's biographies will also be featured in the Ag complex.

"Farms have been the backbone of West Virginia since it was founded, and women are the backbones of those farms," said Commissioner of Agriculture Walt Helmick. "We are so focused on growing agriculture in West Virginia again, and I believe our women "agripreneurs" will be a huge part of that growth."

Nomination forms can be obtained by contacting the WVDA's Ag Outreach Specialist Cindy Shreve via e-mail at cshreve@wvda.us or on the WVDA website at agriculture.wv.gov.

Honeybees, continued

Any chemical used to control the mite can affect the bee as well, and when used within the hive can lead to honey contamination and human exposure. Plus, the social nature of individual honeybees makes it likely that bees from different hives come into close contact with each other. Therefore, it is important that diseased or infested colonies be detected and treated to protect other colonies.

To further that goal, the "West Virginia Apiary Act" (WVC Chapter 19, Article 13, Section 4) requires beekeepers to register their colonies annually with WVDA. There is no fee for registration or inspection services.

Beekeeping is an important part of West Virginia agriculture with 857 registered beekeepers caring for over 11,000 hives in the state. The honey produced by the bees and the pollination services they provide contribute greatly to our agricultural economy.

For thousands of years humans have utilized honeybees by collecting honey and wax from wild colonies. Ancient artwork found on rock walls suggest gathering food from honeybees took place 15,000 years ago. Further evidence of their importance is found in Egyptian burial chambers where sealed pots have been found containing honey. Egyptian artwork depicts domesticated honey bees 4,000 years ago.

In the early 1600's honey bees were introduced into North America by European settlers. Swarming, a natural behavior, helped spread the bees' range ahead of the westward movement of settlers and populated much of North America with feral honey bee colonies. This was even noticed by Native Americans at the time.

Early on, colonies were housed in pots, hollow logs and hives made from reed or rope known as skeps. In more modern times, removable frame hives are used to allow easy inspection and honey harvest.

Modern hives, mostly Langstroth hives, are built to allow frames of wax, brood and honey to be removed and inspected without destroying the colony or the structure of the comb. These hives are now a necessity in West Virginia to allow apiary inspectors access for detecting contagious pests and diseases. Stay tuned for a more detailed article on this Varroa mites in a future issue of the Market Bulletin.

To register colonies, or for more information, contact the WVDA Plant Industries Division at 304-558-2212, State Apiarist Wade Stiltner at 304-550-0589 or Apiary Specialist Rebecca Moretto at 304-257-8919.

Sound, continued

Dressed in a camo jacket and muck boots, Sammy gets busy moving dirty bedding out of the pens and putting clean hay back in. He grabs the watering hose to fill up the pig's containers, and he makes sure the animals have plenty to eat. He also stops to scratch a pig's belly between chores.

He concentrates on the task at hand and helps out wherever he's needed.

"Sammy has a great work ethic and takes a lot of pride in it," says Milliken.

In fact, HHS Ag Education Instructor Isaac Lewis says, "I'd love to have Sammy work here on the farm! He pays attention. He sees things we don't."

Lewis explains while the noise and commotion in the barn distract some of his students, Sammy remains focused. He uses other senses to spot tasks left undone or find problems that were overlooked by everyone else.

During the first of March, Sammy's carefully cared-for pigs went off to slaughter. Sammy and DaShawn learned how to schedule butchering, pick out the cuts of meat, and cure hams and bacon. The finished product were sold April 19 on <http://www.showpig.com/> under "High School on the Hog." Half the proceeds went to HHS for the cost of the pigs, the other half Milliken splits between the WVSDA FFA chapter and Sammy and DaShawn.

While Sammy admits he loves the barn and working with plants in the greenhouse, his real passion lies under the hood of anything you can drive. During the summer and on weekends, Sammy works in an auto shop in his hometown of Justice. Once he graduates, he plans to become a mechanic. He knows the lessons in the barn will be invaluable.

"I get to show employers I've worked here in the barn. I'm responsible. I have a good work ethic. I show up on time. I take pride in my work," stresses Sammy.

As for raising pigs after graduation, Sammy says he's not sure he'll be hosting hogs anytime soon.

However, Milliken stresses he'd be a great farmer just the same.

"Top Chefs of West Virginia" Cookbook

A cookbook by Allen Arnold and Maureen Crockett highlight the array of recipes and cooking styles of 20 of our state's finest chefs. It also reflects the amazingly diverse and global culinary traditions that inspire their recipes. Below is just a few of the recipes that you will find in the cookbook that can be purchased at your local bookstore or www.wvbookco.com.

Nemat Odeh – As Executive Chef at Canaan Valley Resort, Chef Odeh combined his international culinary experience with West Virginia's regional cuisine. He is a graduate of the Culinary Academy of Cooking in Germany and Western Connecticut State University. His culinary career included stops in Switzerland, Manhattan, Washington DC and Las Vegas.

Joy Marr – Marr is a caterer, innkeeper and chef. She is owner-operator of JM Catering, River Rock Retreat – a European-style hostel and the Chef at Gourmet on the Gorge. She uses ingredients that you can find at your local farmers' market and sources everything local and sustainable when she can.

Michael Brown – Brown is a chef at Provence Market Café in Bridgeport. He has traveled the world sampling many cuisines but his emphasis at Provence market is on using local West Virginia ingredients.

Bill Sohovich – A well-known Charleston area chef and restaurateur who died in 2013, Sohovich was a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America. He operated Blossom Deli on Quarrier Street, Billy's at Southridge Centre and Soho's at Capitol Market. Made-from-scratch foods and premium ingredients were the trademark of his culinary creations.

Ramp and Apple Cider Dressing

Joy Marr

Yield: 2 cups

Prep Time: 60 minutes

- 3 cups apple cider
- ¼ cup honey
- ¼ teaspoon coarse salt
- ¼ teaspoon celery seeds
- ¼ teaspoon black peppercorns, crushed
- 8-12 ounces ramps, trimmed and rinsed well water

Cook apple cider over low heat until reduced by half. Add honey, salt, celery seeds and peppercorns; bring to a boil.

Add ramps; return to boil.

Reduce heat to low; simmer for 15 minutes.

Add up to 1 cup of water if the dressing is becoming more like a sauce instead of a salad dressing consistency.

Remove from heat; allow mixture to cool.

Store in a jar in the refrigerator for up to two weeks.

Beer Braised Chicken

Michael Brown

Yield: 2 Servings

Active Prep Time: 25 minutes

- 2 chicken breasts
- 12 ounces beer (1 can)
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 6 red-skinned potatoes, halved
- 2 celery stalks, chopped
- 4 carrots, peeled & quartered
- ¾ cup onion, chopped

Brown chicken in olive oil and butter.

Remove chicken and add celery, carrots and onions, sauté until onions have started to caramelize.

Add the chicken and beer.

Bake in covered casserole at 350°F oven for 45 minutes. (Do not open the oven.)

After the 45 minutes have passed, add potatoes and cook an additional 45 minutes. At this time if more liquid is needed use chicken broth or vegetable broth. (A great sauce can be made from the liquid after cooking by adding roux.)

Gorgonzola Polenta

Bill Sohovich

- |                                 |                                   |
|---------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| 1 quart heavy cream             | 1 cup gorgonzola cheese, crumbled |
| 1 quart half and half cream     | 2 cups fresh spinach              |
| 2 tablespoons minced garlic     | 4 ounces mascarpone cheese        |
| 1¾ cups fine polenta (cornmeal) | Salt & pepper to taste            |

In large sauce pan, saute garlic in 2 teaspoons olive oil. Add heavy cream and half and half. Bring to a simmer. Slowly add polenta, stirring until it thickens. Continue to stir on a very low simmer for about 15 minutes.

Add gorgonzola cheese and continue to simmer until cheese starts to melt into polenta. Remove from heat. Add mascarpone cheese, stir until fully incorporated. Add spinach into the polenta and mix well.

Cover and let sit until ready to use. Yield: 6 servings

Canaan House Smoked Salmon

Nemat Odeh

Yield: Allow 6 oz per person
Active Prep Time: 20 minutes
Smoke for 3 hours

- 2 half sides of fresh Atlantic salmon, skin-on (wash and pat dry)

Mix all ingredients in dry rub together. Spread over the salmon; cover with foil. Smoke in a smoker for three hours. When ready, let it rest 15 to 20 minutes in the foil. Open the foil and transfer the salmon to a clean container.

Dry rub

- 2 teaspoons dill
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 2 teaspoons cumin
- 1 teaspoon thyme
- 2 cups brown sugar, packed
- ½ cup bbq seasoning
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- ½ teaspoon cracked black pepper
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 cup maple syrup

WV Participates for first time in National Maple Survey

West Virginia's maple industry continues to grow by leaps and bounds. More than two dozen producers across the state already turn sap into maple syrup, maple candy, maple sugar and other maple treats. In order to find out how many people now take part in the business, West Virginia, for the first time, will be included in the National Maple Survey conducted by the National Agricultural Statistics Service. The survey asks various questions including the number of taps, the amount of syrup produced, sap flow temperature, the color of the syrup, sales and the length of sap collection.

State Statistician for the WV field office, Charmaine Wilson, said being a part of the national study helps the agriculture community, business leaders and data users. "The survey's results will help others really see what the producers are doing in West Virginia. It's a great tool. When people respond to surveys, the estimates are better. We are excited to begin this program and work closely with the West Virginia Department of Agriculture."

Final results will be released in the Crop Production Report on June 10. This and all NASS reports are available online at www.nass.usda.gov. For more information, call the NASS West Virginia Field Office at 1-800-535-7088.

Northern Panhandle Conservation Agencies Partner for Annual Women's Agriculture Day May 17

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is partnering with local federal, state and local agencies for the 7th Annual Women in Agriculture event, May 17.

Main topics for this year's event are Pollinators, Urban Farming and the Art of Maple Syrup. Attendees will learn about gardening, maple syrup production, honey bees and various other agriculture demonstrations. Vendors and financial assistance agencies will also be on site to provide information on their services.

"Women in Agriculture Day is a great learning opportunity for participants and each year more women come from all backgrounds of agriculture to attend," said Katie Fitzsimmons, NRCS District Conservationist. "There are so many kinds of agriculture and women are starting to branch out from traditional farming and gardening to beekeeping and growing produce in high tunnel system. Regardless of what agriculture interest attendees have, there is definitely something for everyone at this event."

The first Moundsville area Women in Agriculture Day took place in 2009. Since then, attendance has grown from 100 to 250. As more women are seeking careers and finding an interest in agriculture topics, the need for education has also increased. The event is often attended by residents of West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

"Although this event takes place in West Virginia, the topics are broad enough to apply to areas outside the state and any women interested in agriculture topics are welcome to attend," said Rebecca Reilly, FSA Program Technician. "It's beneficial to offer these types of events to help attendees get started, learn the best ways to be successful, what support is available and provide answers to questions. It's also chance for attendees to share experiences and make connections with others who have similar interests."

The event is scheduled from 8:30 a.m. – 3:30 p.m. at the Moundsville Center, 818 Jefferson Avenue, Moundsville, on the site of the former Moundsville Penitentiary, May 17. The cost is $5 to cover lunch, which will be provided. Advanced registration is required prior to May 9.

To register, please contact Joy Riggle at 304-242-0576, ext. 122 or by sending an e-mail request to joylene.riggle@wv.usda.gov.

Mid-Atlantic Maple Camp to be held in Morgantown

A 2016 Cornell Maple Camp will be hosted by West Virginia Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the new West Virginia Maple Producers Association under the title 2016 Mid-Atlantic Maple Camp. The Camp will be centered in Morgantown, West Virginia and will be held July 20-23. Maple Camp features two half days and two full days of training intended to introduce new or existing maple enterprises to commercial production. Topics covered include sugarbush evaluation and management, sap collection system design and management, vacuum, RO, boiling, finishing, filtering, storing and marketing syrup, making quality value added maple products along with business planning and management.

Equine Event Organizers

The WVDA has recently implemented an "Equine Event Report" and is encouraging all equine event organizers to use this form during their events. The purpose of the form is disease traceability. Currently if there is an outbreak at an event or in the days following, the WVDA has no information on the horses that were present and potentially exposed.

At the conclusion of an event, coordinators should document all horses at the event and send the report to: WVDA, Animal Health Division, 1900 Kanawha Blvd., East, Charleston, WV 25305-0172.

The report is available at <http://1.usa.gov/24mDUrJ>.

Please contact the WVDA Animal Health Division at 304-558-2214 with any questions.
