Moving Agriculture forward in tight financial times

The West Virginia Department of Agriculture – and state government in general – continues to struggle with budget cuts necessitated largely by the decline of the coal industry and the tax revenue that comes with it. Our state has seen similar shifts in the past. The Kanawha Valley was at one time a world leader in chemical production. That industry is now a fraction of what it once was.

However, agriculture is one industry where demand will continue to grow, and we have a very real opportunity to produce much more of the food we eat right here in West Virginia, if we're willing to be innovative and move in a different direction.

Walt's View

I paid a recent visit to Preston High School in Kingwood where I toured the school's impressive meat sciences program. This is one of the few high schools in the country where students can learn the meat processing business from bottom to top. The school has a small herd of cattle pastured adjacent to the school and also brings in animals from nearby farms to be slaughtered, cut and sold. When students graduate, they are prepared to immediately take a job producing food for consumers.

Although more schools are embracing agriculture education at some level, too many still lack a strong agricultural curriculum, largely because students and teachers lack any real association with the industry beyond shopping for groceries. At WVDA, we have been stepping up educational programs – especially at the elementary school level – to build awareness and appreciation of agriculture.

I was at Scott Teays Elementary with staff and had a wonderful time interacting with the third-graders there. Although we simply helped the students plant flowers in Styrofoam cups they had decorated, it provided them with a tangible example of how plants grow.

At Mineral Wells Grade School, staff helped students design personal healthy snack recipe cards. The students also "bought" ingredients with play money to make parfaits – teaching them about nutrition and the cost of food. They also examined the inner workings of a demonstration bee hive, which they found endlessly fascinating.

These efforts will make programs such as Preston County's possible in other areas because students, teachers and administrators will see food production as a serious career path. I'm confident that local school systems will see the value in ag education. It is practical, hands-on way to teach subjects such as math, science and business skills. And whether or not students become farmers, learning about agriculture helps them appreciate the complex industry and government policies that provide all of us the safe and affordable food we rely on every day.

I've been travelling a great deal in the past month. I helped kick off West Virginia's fairs and festivals season in Buckhannon, where I crowned the king of the Strawberry Festival and rode in the parade. I also participated in the West Virginia Woodchoppers Festival parade and the annual Farmers' Day Parade in Union.

But it hasn't all been parades and festivals. I was joined in the historic town of Bramwell by Rep. Nick Rahall to help the town open up a brand new farmers' market. This is the first new market to come online under my administration, and I wish them the best.

Gov. Earl Ray Tomblin and I participated in a "Beef for Fathers' Day" promotion at the Governor's Mansion. Charleston media and representatives of the state's beef industry enjoyed a superb brisket lunch provided by Flying W Farms of Burlington, a true farm-to-fork operation.

Commissioner of Agriculture Walt Helmick (center) participated in the grand opening of the brand new Bramwell Farmers' Market May 24. The market will be open on Fridays from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. during the growing season. The historic town is famous for once having the highest concentration of millionaires in the country. Today, many of the historic homes remain and the town is a hub of activity related to the Hatfield-McCoy Trail System. Pictured from left are U.S. Congressman Nick Rahall, National Coal Heritage Area Executive Director Christy Baily, Bramwell Mayor Lou Stoker, Commissioner Helmick, Bramwell Depot Manager Richard Bullins, AmeriCorps VISTA volunteer Rachelle Garner.

Commissioner Helmick chats with Preston County Superintendent of Schools Dr. Larry Parsons and engineer Craig Barker about plans at Preston High School to build a new barn for the school's agriculture programs.

WVDA MISSION STATEMENT... The mission of the West Virginia Department of Agriculture is to protect plant, animal and human health and the state's food supply through a variety of scientific and regulatory programs; to provide vision, strategic planning and emergency response for agricultural and other civil emergencies; to promote industrial safety and protect consumers through educational and regulatory programs; and to foster economic growth by promoting West Virginia agriculture and agribusinesses throughout the state and abroad.

Commissioner of Agriculture Walt Helmick, a trained auctioneer, was called upon to sell two passes to the Greenbrier Classic Golf Tournament following the Preston County Chamber of Commerce annual dinner. West Virginia's nearly 11,000 beef cattle farmers produced 195,000 head worth more than $140 million in 2011, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service. Beef is a cornerstone of the state's agricultural economy, and I'm committed to finding ways to keep West Virginia cattle and West Virginia dollars in this state.

A recently released study conducted by the University of Delaware and others indicates that the amount of nitrogen in poultry litter is dramatically lower than the figure EPA has been using for decades. The study, based on thousands of manure tests, found that actual nitrogen levels in poultry house manure are 55 percent lower than EPA's lab-based standards.

In addition, the study said that the amount of manure being generated is substantially lower than the amount modeled by the Chesapeake Bay Program – as little as onesixth in some cases. This study supports what the agriculture community has been saying for years about the Chesapeake Bay Program's nutrient reduction allocations. Hopefully, this data will result in modifications to the program's model, which has targeted agriculture for the largest portion of nutrient reductions.

I trust most of you have your gardens in already. Although we're a little bit behind where we were last year, weather conditions have been generally very good. A few tips on watering your garden:

Grouping plants according to their water needs will save water and help each plant get the amount of moisture it needs. Keep water percolating in the zone - the top six-to-eight inches of soil, generally speaking. Keeping that section moist should provide adequate moisture without drowning the root system. Gardens need about one inch of water a week. About 60 gallons will provide 1 in. of water over 100 sq. ft. Once any transplants are established, deeper, less-frequent watering helps build strong root systems. Finally, don't water the leaves of your plants, just the ground around them. Under bright sunlight, the water drops can intensify the rays and damage the leaves. If you water in the evening and the leaves remain wet, there's a greater chance for fungus or other diseases to develop.

Four to be Inducted into the Agriculture and Forestry Hall of Fame

The West Virginia Agriculture and Forestry Hall of Fame (WVAFHF) Foundation will be inducting four outstanding individuals into the Hall of Fame for 2013. These individuals will be honored at the Foundation's annual banquet held at Jackson's Mill Saturday, July 20.

Patrick D. Bowen has demonstrated a long-term commitment to partnering financial assistance, technical know-how and dedication to on-the-ground conservation programs to help countless private landowners improve water quality. Whether through direct action, or working behind the scenes, his vast knowledge of federal and state conservation programs and his ability to work with people have resulted in significant improvement of conservation practices and water quality throughout West Virginia. He is a third generation conservationist, following his Civilian Conservation Corps-member Greatuncle, his Grandfather, a Mississippi conservation district member, and his Father, who was a Soil Conservation Service (SCS) employee until 1980.

Mr. Bowen started working with SCS/Natural Resources Conservation Service in 1981. During his career, he has been instrumental in obtaining more than $24 million in financial assistance for landowners and the application of more than 5,000 conservation practices.

He worked hard for the passage of the Farmland Protection Act of 2000 and the transfer tax funding amendment in 2002. He was instrumental in the formation of the W.Va. Association of Farmland Protection Boards, and helped organize the first W.Va. Agricultural Land Protection Authority Board of Trustees, which in 10 years developed 18 funded county Farmland Protection Boards that have eased 153 properties and returned $45 million to our landowners, including $25 million in state money and $20 million in federal money.

Mr. Bowen also has an extensive history of creative and measurable environmental conservation projects to his credit.

He was the federal liaison and primary author of the W.Va. Agricultural Non-Point Source Assessment Report and Management Program, which attracted more than $25 million in federal funds to implement agricultural water quality practices across the state.

Of particular note is his leadership of the state's Clean Water Act Section 319 Team in the early 1990s. A partnership between NRCS and EPA, the project brought in funds to implement water quality practices along streams under Total Maximum Daily Loads (TMDLs) orders. The project was so successful, two streams were eventually removed from the state list of impaired streams – a rare feat.

He has been a strong proponent of nutrient management planning, promoting the process as the best way for producers to protect the environment, make money and avoid regulatory enforcement actions.

He initiated discussions about exporting poultry litter from sensitive watershed to nutrient- and organicdeficient areas to address concerns about nutrient loading in the Potomac Headwaters/Chesapeake Bay Drainage. The results were a multi-agency water quality office, a litter marketing and distribution program, a valueadded composting demonstration and a state subsidy for litter transportation costs. Mr. Bowen has been a member of the Soil and Water Conservation Society since 1981 and served as President of the West Virginia Chapter in 1987. That organization presented him with the Harold and Kay Scholl Excellence in Conservation Award in 2004. The National Awards Council for Environmental Sustainability gave him its Certificate of Environmental Achievement in 1996, and the USDA Soil Conservation Service/Natural Resources Conservation Service has presented him with numerous awards recognizing his outstanding achievements.

Mr. Bowen is an Eagle Scout and a Trustee for the Mountaineer Area Council BSA Endowment Fund and the Austin Bowen Memorial Campers Opportunity Fund. He is currently helping to plan the National Boy Scout Jamboree that will be held in southern West Virginia in 2013.

Roger L. Nestor was raised on his family's farm in the Moatsville area of Barbour County. The oldest of six children, he and his siblings worked on the farm and cared for the cow herd. After graduating high school in 1969, he attended West Virginia University where he earned a B.S. degree in Agronomy in 1973 and an M.S. degree in Agronomy in 1976. In August of 1975, he married his wife, Reta Jean.

4-H Happenings...

Summer 4-H activities in full swing

By Dr. Jean M. Woloshuk, WVU Extension Specialist, 4-H Youth Agriculture

Summer 4-H activities and events are in full swing both at the county, state and national levels.

Congratulations to the Monroe County 4-H team for bringing home a Reserve Champion Trophy for their second place finish in the 62nd Annual National Land Judging and Homesite Evaluation Contests in Oklahoma City, OK on May 2 (see photo below).

Monroe County 4-H team (I-r): Brian Wickline, Coach/WVU Extension Agent Monroe County; Ty Wickline, Lance Wilson, Laine Shiflet, Josh Dransfield and Kevin Miller.

The team coached by WVU Extension Agent Brian Wickline consisted of 4-H'ers-Lance Wilson, Ty Wickline, Josh Dransfield and Laine Shiflet. Lance Wilson was the first-place scorer in both the Land Judging and Homesite Evaluation Contests. Also accompanying and assisting with the team was Kevin Miller, 4-H volunteer.

Braxton County 4-H Junior and Preston County 4-H Senior Horse Judging teams received top honors at the State 4-H and FFA Horse Judging Contest April 27, at Potomac State College of WVU. One hundred four 4-H and FFA members vied for top honors to represent their respective county/chapter at each organization's national contest. The contest consisted of 4 halter and 3 performance classes with senior youth presenting 2 oral reasons presentations and junior contestants presenting 1 set of oral reasons. This event is designed to provide youth participants with the opportunity to develop critical thinking, leadership, teamwork, evaluation, communication and decision-making skills, in addition to being able to recognize good conformation, breed character and performance ideals in different breeds of horses and defend their selection through learning to speak clearly and convincingly through the presentation of oral reasons. In the Junior 4-H Competition, Braxton County A team placed first with members Emily Miller, Mersadie Rader, Raven Friend and Madison Rollyson. They were coached by Barbie Rader.

Braxton County A Junior 4-H Team (I-r): Emily Miller, Madison Rollyson, Sadie Rader and Raven Friend.

The 2nd place Junior team from Berkeley County A was Courtney Murray, Julia O'Neill, Hope Damon, Allyson Walker and Coach Cheryl Lynch; and the 3rd place Junior team from Putnam County A was Brooke Welch, Tyler Gilliam, Barett Duddging, Jimmy Young and Coach/WVU Extension Agent, Beth Baldwin.

In the Senior 4-H Division, Preston County placed first consisting of 4-H members Morgan Hamilton, Britiney Storms, Stephanie Cummings, Brianna Grimes and Coach, Debby Grimes. The 2nd place Senior team from Berkeley County B was Mikayla O'Neill, Kaitlin Foster, Destinee Bain, Jolie Hormer and Coach Cheryl Lynch. The 3rd place Junior team also from Berkeley County A was Elizabeth Lynch, Austin Cline, Kimberly Hutton, Sophie Walker and Coach Cheryl Lynch. The winning senior 4-H team will represent West Virginia at the Eastern National 4-H Horse Roundup on November 8-10, 2013 in Louisville, KY.

4-H members from throughout the state are gearing up for participation in the 2013 State 4-H Dog Skillathon to be held in conjunction with State 4-H Days, July 26 in Morgantown; the State Fair of West Virginia, August 9-17 in Lewisburg and the West Virginia Dairy Cattle Show & Festival, August 10-13 at WVU Jackson's Mill in Weston. Junior show exhibitors (4-H and FFA members) at the State Fair will be competing in Dept F activities in Market Steers, Feeder Steers, Beef Heifers, Dairy Cattle, Market Lamb, Purebred Sheep, Market Hog, Purebred Swine, Market Goats and Horse shows and skillathon competitions. The West Virginia Dairy Cattle Show and Festival will feature youth activities which include the Dairy Bowl, State 4-H & FFA Dairy Cattle Judging Contest, youth portion of the Black and White and Colored Breed Shows, Dairy Skillathon and the youth Showmanship contests. In addition, the West Virginia State Livestock Roundup will be taking place September 11-15 at WVU Jackson's Mill.

For more information on the WVU Extension Service 4-H Program contact your local WVU Extension Office.

Programs and activities offered by the West Virginia University Extension Service are available to all persons without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age, veteran status, political beliefs, sexual orientation, national origin, and marital or family status. Issued in furtherance of Cooperative Extension work, Acts of May 8 and June 30, 1914, in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Director, Cooperative Extension Service, West Virginia University.

Thousand Cankers Disease

Jill A. Rose, FHP Coordinator/Forest Pathologist WVDA Plant Industries Division

Thousand cankers disease (TCD) is a progressive disease complex that eventually kills its host. The diseasecausing fungus (Geosmithia morbida) is transmitted by a small twig beetle. The three major symptoms of this disease are branch mortality, numerous small cankers on branches and the bole, and evidence of tiny bark beetles. The earliest symptom is yellowing foliage that progresses rapidly to brown wilted foliage, then finally branch mortality. The fungus causes distinctive circular to oblong cankers in the phloem under the bark, which eventually kill the cambium. The bark surface may have no symptoms, or a dark amber stain or cracking of the bark may occur directly above a canker. Numerous tiny bark beetle entrance and exit holes (top photo) are visible on dead and dying branches and bark beetle galleries are often found within the cankers (bottom photo). In the final stages of disease, even the main stem has beetle attacks and cankers.

The eastern range of the disease was thought to occur along the Front Range of Colorado, but in August of 2010, TCD was detected on urban trees in Knox County, TN. This was the first detection of this disease complex east of the Mississippi River and was the first find in the native range of eastern black walnut. In July and August of 2011, TCD was detected in Henrico and Chesterfield Counties, VA on urban trees and Bucks County, PA on black walnut at an artisan woodworker's residence. In 2012, TCD was detected at two campgrounds in the Smokey Mountains National park and the walnut twig beetle was trapped outside a wood processing business in Butler County, Ohio.

TCD affects black walnut most significantly but other walnuts such as Arizona walnut, English walnut, California and butternut have shown varying degrees of susceptibility to G. morbida. Black walnut is very valuable to consumers, food processers, industrial processes, harvesters, growers and small businesses.

Its commercial value lies in numerous forms including veneer, lumber and nut products. Final products made of walnut include furniture, cabinets, interior trim, wood carvings, instruments and gun stocks. Nuts from walnut have a variety of uses from food products to polishing compound. Black walnut hulls are used for flavoring and as a health food extract for a variety of skin and intestinal ailments.

Black walnut is a rather important species for wildlife because of its nutritious nut meat. Wildlife species that consume the nuts are generally rodents such as squirrels and mice. These species are expected to be moderately to severely impacted should black walnut be lost from the landscape.

4-H Happenings... cont. from May Market Bulletin

The Multi-Disciplinary State 4-H Shooting Sports Camp was held on April 5-7, 2013 at the Gilmer County 4-H Recreational Center in Glenville with 64 youth and 34 shooting sports instructors/ chaperones from 20 counties throughout the state in attendance. The counties represented included: Braxton, Brooke, Doddridge, Gilmer, Grant, Hampshire, Jefferson, Kanawha, Marshall, Mineral, Monongalia, Monroe, Ohio, Pendleton, Pleasants, Preston, Roane, Tyler, Upshur, and Wayne. The youth enhanced their skills and knowledge in the disciplines of air rifle, air pistol, shotgun, muzzleoading, archery, and wildlife/hunting conservation. A guest speaker for the day was Thomas Snyder, Academic Teaching Assistant at Glenville State College who spoke on Trapping.

Loss of the black walnut timber industry could have a large economic impact as well as significant ecological consequences. Black walnut in the eastern United States has an estimated value of over half a trillion dollars.

There are no known means of reliably controlling this disease that have been identified. There have been attempts to control walnut twig beetle by use of drenching sprays of insecticides (permethrin, bifenthrin) but they have not shown to be effective. The use of soil applied systemic neonicotinoid insecticides is a possibility for bark beetle control and there has been some use of imidacloprid for this purpose, but these treatments seem to have had negligible effectiveness. Trunk injected fungicides have not been evaluated for managing this disease.

The best way to determine if TCD is present in the state is through early detection monitoring by trapping for the walnut twig beetle. A specific lure for the walnut twig beetle was developed and it became available last year. The WVDA is planning a statewide trapping effort beginning this spring. Campgrounds, parks, sawmills, log yards and other wood products industries are the primary targets.

Four Inducted into Agriculture and Forestry Hall of Fame

In November 1977 he started working as an Agriculture Extension Agent in Upshur County, and in 1984, he transferred to Barbour County, where he remained until his retirement in 2012.

Although Mr. Nestor has been involved in significant grassland and livestock programs throughout his career, his most obvious achievement is the Barbour County 4-H land judging and home site evaluation programs he began building in 1979.

Since 1985, 16 of Nestor's 34 teams have qualified to go to the National Contest. Six have finished second, and nine have won national titles in either the 4-H Land Judging or Home Site Evaluation Contests. Four teams have won both titles in the same year, and the Barbour County Land Judging Team took three consecutive National Land Judging Championships between 2002 and 2004, the first-ever three-peat in the 60-year history of the event.

But Mr. Nestor's true greatness is the time, effort and love he puts into each student, building selfconfidence and team skills along with knowledge of soil uses and management. Although retired, Nestor volunteers to continue coaching the teams, and has led fund-raising efforts so team members won't face financial hardships on their regular trips to Oklahoma City for the national contests.

Nestor also has provided untiring service and research to the farmers of the state. For 27 years, he has helped local farmers in their selection of performance tested bulls. He also played an important role in establishing a Barbour County calf pool.

For more than 15 years, he compiled carcass data on the Barbour County 4-H market animals to better help the 4-H and FFA members improve the quality of these animals. He has also been involved with contract grazing research at WVU for more than 18 years. His work with grassland management and feeder cattle programs have led to better farm productivity for countless individuals throughout the state.

The 4-H & FFA market animal program in Barbour County increased from 38 exhibitors to 60 during his tenure, and the market animal sale grew from approximately $29,000 in 1984 to nearly $105,000 when he retired. He has served as the Swine Superintendent at the W.Va. State Fair for more than 15 years.

Mr. Nestor was awarded the Honorary FFA Degree in 1995, the 2001 Distinguished Service Award from the National County Agriculture Agents Association, and the Barbour County Chamber of Commerce Director's Special Award in 2006. In 2011, he was named an Outstanding 4-H All-Star, and in 2012, the Barbour County Fair Livestock Barn was named in his honor.

Eldon Plaugher was born in 1948 in Parsons. He graduated from Parsons High School in 1966 and earned two degrees from Glenville State College – an AAS in Forest Technology in 1970 and a B.A. in Business in 1974. He is well-recognized in the industry for his skill and experience as a forester and land surveyor, and has often served as the public face of industrial forestry in West Virginia. A lifelong resident of West Virginia, he remains a lifelong steward of the land.

He has worked in forestry since his student days, serving two summer internships with the U.S. Forest Service. In 1966 he was part of the timber marking crew of the Cheat Ranger District of the Monongahela National Forest, and 1987, he worked with the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station and the Fernow Experimental Forest.

From 1970-1975, he worked as a Forest Technician with Glenville State College's Department of Forest Technology, where he conducted labs in Forest Management, Surveying, Wood Products, Aerial Photography, Timber Harvesting and Dendrology for future foresters and land managers. He was first licensed as a Land Surveyor in 1976. He is also a licensed W.Va. Forester and W.Va. Real Estate Agent.

From January 1975 until his retirement in April 2010, Mr. Plaugher was an employee of MeadWestvaco Corporation (MWV). During his 35 years with MWV, he held a number of positions, including Elkins Area Supervisor and Land Agent for MWVs Appalachian Forest. At MWV he acquired, managed and sold hundreds of thousands of acres throughout his career.

During his tenure in Elkins he worked for many years with the W.Va. Society of American Foresters (SAF) on the Teachers' Economic Tour, an educational program designed to improve the forestry knowledge of high school science teachers and students.

He also established a field tour that became an outdoor classroom, demonstrating a broad array of important forest management and road construction methods. Always included was a stop at a local sawmill and a veneer yard so the participants could see the entire cycle of forestry.

A 40-plus-year member of the SAF, Mr. Plaugher served as chairman and co-chairman of the W.Va. Division of the SAF. He has been a member of the West Virginia Forestry Association since its founding in 1972, and served two terms on its Board of Directors. He has served over 20 years as a member of the Glenville State College Forest Technology Advisory Committee.

Mr. Plaugher was elected a Fellow of the Society of American Foresters in 2004, and the Council of Eastern Forestry Technician Schools presented him with the Graduate Forestry Technician Achievement Award in 2000.

He is an avid outdoorsman and a member of the W.Va. Christmas Tree Growers Association. With his wife, Linda, he manages a small choose- and- cut Christmas tree farm. He and his family enjoy gardening and harvest hay on approximately eight acres.

Linda worked for the U.S. Forest Service for 20 years until her retirement in December 2012. His two sons hold advanced degrees in Forestry from WVU, and are following in his footsteps as leaders in the forest industry.

Enshrinement in the Hall of Fame is reserved for those individuals, businesses, organizations, institutions and foundations that have made outstanding contributions to the establishment, development, advancement and improvement of the agricultural, forestry and family life of West Virginia.

Elwood Williams was born and raised in Moorefield. He was only 12 when his father died, and he used his bicycle to deliver milk from the family's three cows to support the family. He also worked for local chicken farmers throughout the year to help the family make ends meet.

He graduated from Moorefield High School in 1952, attended Potomac State College in 1952-1953, and then entered Virginia Polytechnic Institute (VPI) in the fall of 1953 under the first four-year Rockingham Poultry Marketing Cooperative Scholarship. He graduated with honors with a B.S. Degree in Poultry Science in 1956, followed by an M.S. Degree in Agriculture Economics in 1957.

He worked for Rockingham Poultry Marketing Cooperative and later Pierce Foods/Hester Industries. It was at Pierce that Mr. Williams helped to develop "Wing Dings," which led to wings becoming the most popular appetizer in the nation, and provided a springboard for several other further-processed products. Working with manufacturers, he designed new cookers, batters and breaders for the plant. These designs are now used throughout the industry. Mr. Williams became vice president for new product development and traveled the world to open new markets for poultry and other further processed meat products.

When he started at the company in 1959, it had two products, 15 employees and gross receipts of $225,000 per year. When the company was sold to ConAgra, it was a $100 million per year company with 750 employees.

Mr. Williams and his late wife, Joyce Kessel Williams, operated K & W Equipment, a John Deere franchise and Misty Mountain Farms, where the family still raises breeder hens, Suffolk sheep, commercial and purebred Black Angus cattle and club calves. The farm was recently filmed by the Chesapeake Bay Commission as an example of best management environmental practices.

Mr. Williams and his second wife, Yvonne, are active board members of the Hardy County Tour and Crafts Association and plan the Antique Tractor and Car Show. They worked diligently in support of a bond issue to build a new Moorefield High School and to renovate East Hardy High School.

He has been a leader in numerous civic and professional groups, including South Branch Railroad Board Chairman, U.S. Poultry and Egg Association Board of Directors member, West Virginia Poultry Association President, and 50-plus years as a member of the Moorefield Lions Club.

He was instrumental in preserving the CSX rail line through Moorefield, the construction of Moorefield Town Park, and was a founding member of the first Hardy County Rural Development Authority.

The Moorefield High School FFA made him an honorary member and the West Virginia Poultry Association honored him as a Lifetime Member in 2006. Most recently, the Hardy County Chamber of Commerce named him Community Service Person of the Year in 2011.
