Stimulating the growth of Agriculture in West Virginia

As we approach another change of seasons in West Virginia I am happy to report to you that we here at the WVDA are continuing our efforts to stimulate the growth of Agriculture in West Virginia.

Two particular areas I would like to update you on this month are potatoes and cattle.

Potatoes being grown by West Virginia farmers, as part of a pilot program we launched two years ago in conjunction with the West Virginia Conservation Agency, are now being processed and packaged at our new aggregation facility in Huntington. Sales of those 2016 crops have already been made to wholesalers, grocers and school systems across the state with more to come during the next several months.

As part of our joint effort with the West Virginia National Guard to operate that facility in Cabell County, we have employed Veterans to assist us in the work. We also have a group of Veterans growing more than 20 acres of potatoes in southeastern West Virginia this year and they have expressed to us that they fully intend to expand their growing program in 2017 to more than 100 acres.

I have long held the belief that West Virginia farmers can grow a variety of crops for both commercial and personal consumption and we are clearly beginning to see the fruits of the labor being put into the pilot program the last two years.

Ready to Roll! Mobile education unit takes visitors "underground" where the soil comes alive

Do you know what's going on underneath your feet? It's Aimee Figgatt's mission to educate you. The District Manager of the Capitol Conservation District has been working on a project for more than three and a half years and it's ready to hit the road. The Soil Tunnel Trailer is part classroom, part museum and all labor of love.

Figgatt got the idea for the concept at a National Association of Conservation District Conference in San Antonio, TX in 2013. A group from Kansas was showing off a mobile soil lab that gave people a sneak peek into the underground world. Figgatt immediately knew she could adapt that concept and create something even better for her conservation district.

"I didn't ask my district for any money. I made them a deal. If I could procure a grant to get the construction phase started, would they be willing to purchase the trailer itself. They agreed," explained Figgatt.

She worked with the West Virginia Department of Agriculture to write a Specialty Crop Block Grant and was awarded $10,800. The conservation district then purchased the trailer, an extra wide 8 x 16 x 8.

"We designed it to go along with the specialty crops in West Virginia as well as soil and water health. Those three all go together," said Figgatt. "We wanted to make sure a child could understand that good soil and good water equal good food."

Donor cow program to assist WV cattle farmers

In an effort to increase the positive genetic traits in West Virginia's beef cattle, the WVDA last month purchased four donor cows from Express Ranches in Oklahoma.

"This new program is being offered in addition to what West Virginia University and other current breeders are doing in West Virginia," said Agriculture Commissioner Walt Helmick. "These animals have excellent bloodlines. They'll be bred and the embryos will be transferred to our commercial cows. The best of the best of those offspring will be up for sale at the Wardensville and Southern Bull Tests."

The donor cows are located at the WVDA's Pruntytown Farm in Taylor County. WVDA Senior Farm Manager Jon Hall and Pruntytown Farm Manager Josh Radabaugh will oversee the animals. A certified embryologist will handle the flushing and insemination. The goal is to flush embryos from each of the four cows. All of those embryos will be transferred into WVDA commercial cows. The WVDA will then select which animals make the cut for the sales.

"We'll transfer the embryos to the WVDA commercial cows next year. The offspring will be born in the spring of 2018 and will be ready for the Wardensville and Southern sales in March of 2019," said the Commissioner.

'This program will make it possible for more farmers to expand their bloodlines and improve the genetics of their herds.

For more information on the program, contact Jon Hall (jhall@wvda. us) at 304-541-5460 or Josh Radabaugh (jradabaugh@wvda.us) at 304-257-7149.

4-H Fair, Life

The animals showcased at the State Fair of West Virginia are some of the best of the best. Winning is a source of pride. However, not everyone is there to take home first prize. Two 4-H students, one from Raleigh County and the other from Putnam County, believe the fair is about more than just ribbons and trophies.

Austin McCoy loves to spend time in the barn at the state fair. The 17-year old, a student at Independence High School, has a passion for raising cattle and pigs. "I joined 4-H in 2011 and I loved it. Since then, I can't stop showing animals. It's too much fun," Austin explains.

On another front I would encourage you to read the story in this edition of The Market Bulletin that highlights our new Beef Cattle Donor Program designed specifically to improve the genetic pool of cattle for our farmers.

We purchased four donor cows last month and while it will take some time to see the results from the breeding of these genetically superior animals, we are very confident that West Virginia farmers will be able to increase the positive genetic traits of their beef cattle through this program.

Flood Assistance

During the past few months we have been providing surplus vegetables for those who were devastated by the severe flooding in late June. Thousands of pounds of fresh corn, tomatoes and green beans have been distributed in various locations and we intend on continuing this type of assistance as the summer and fall harvest continues.

We also are working in conjunction with the Farm Service Agency to assist farmers this fall with hay. More information on that program will be made available in the next few weeks.

If you have any questions or need further information on flood assistance from the Agriculture Department please contact my office at 304-558-3550.

Wat

At this year's fair, he brought his heifer Kissie and his gilt pig Charlotte (as in Charlotte's Web). Both went into the show ring. There were no first place ribbons but that's not why Austin does it.

"I enjoy the fair. I love showing off my animals and talking about them," he stresses. "Kissie is a good cow. She might win, she might not. It doesn't matter. I'm just here to have fun."

For a 17-year old, Austin's version of "fun" isn't for everyone. It involves getting up at the crack of dawn every morning.

"I spend about two hours in the barn with Kissie every morning and evening. I want her to get used to the grooming chute, used to walking, used to the stick so I can move her legs in the show ring." Same goes for Charlotte. "She's a good little gilt. She weighs 234 lbs. I've spent a lot of time with her since she was little to get her here to the state fair."

Austin's mother Melissa Main says the State Fair of West Virginia isn't a vacation for her son. "It's a learning experience. We come here to have fun, meet new people and show animals. But one night we were at the barn until 2 a.m. cleaning stalls and bathing the animals. We were back at the barn first thing the next morning."

For Austin, his animals are more than just livestock.

"Kissie is a pet. She'll be coming home with me," he stresses. "I'll take her back and breed her. She's not going on the kitchen table. Not this one!" Same thing for Charlotte. "She is stubborn. That's true but Charlotte is really friendly. She's always with me when I'm at the barn. She follows me around. I'm going to breed her too."

He received his fifth Herdsman Award at this year's fair.

In the stall across from Austin is Brooke Welch, a 10th grader at Hurricane High School in Putnam County.

"My Mom was in 4-H. My brother was in 4-H. I joined the Clover Bud program when I was little and I joined 4-H when I was nine," says Brooke. "I begged my Mom to let me show a goat. She said, 'OK."

Chris Welch says she wasn't sure if her daughter was serious about that initial 4-H project.

Brooke Welch and her heifer Darla placed 4th in Showmanship at this year's State Fair of West Virginia.

"That first year we didn't even have a place to put a goat. We had to go to a friend's farm. I was testing Brooke. I tried to make her a little bit miserable. She'd want to go do something with her friends and I'd say, 'Nope, you've got to care for your goat. You can't skip it.' And we went every night."

After a few months, Chris says she knew her daughter was not only dedicated to her goat but 4-H as well.

For the past two years, Brooke has also been showing cattle. This year's state fair entry is a heifer named Darla.

"It's a lot of hard work. I go out to the barn twice a day and feed Darla, rinse her off, blow her out, check to make sure she's healthy and nothing's wrong. To me, that's fun."

It puts a smile on her Mom's face as well.

"We call Brooke our 'hard trier.' She's big at getting 4th place. If there's three prizes, Brooke always comes in 4th," Chris explains. "But in 4-H you learn to understand you're not always going to win. That's part of life. Maybe she doesn't have the best animal but she always does her best."

For Brooke, winning isn't the top prize.

"I always want to show my animal to the best of my ability. You get what you get and you make the best out of it. You're not always going to have the best animal. You have to know to accept that and be proud of what you have.'

She left the state fair with a 4th place ribbon in showmanship.

Austin hopes to be a farmer or a veterinarian one day. Brooke isn't quite sure about her plans just yet. But both 4-H'ers say the lessons they've learned in the program will help them in whatever career they choose.

FFA Convention Food Drive Collects 20,000 Meals

Headlines across the state were pleading for donations for victims of historic flooding. But the tons of food being sorted and palletized by FFA members on the grounds of Cedar Lakes had been months in the making.

"Part of our motto is 'living to serve." said State FFA President J.D. Morris of Wetzel County. "We've wanted to do a large service project at our state convention to give back to the community.'

So calls went out from the state FFA officer team to individual chapters. Individual chapters approached businesses and others for cash donations, and the donations were used to purchase non-perishable food items from the "Feeding America" partnership, the most economical way to purchase large quantities of food.

The food was delivered to Cedar Lakes where FFA members worked their way through a rotating line to fill individual shopping bags with a variety of food. It was then reloaded for a trip to Mountaineer Food Bank (MFB) in Gassaway.

'That's the easiest way to get the most people engaged. Not only did they raise the money, but they got to put their hands on," the items that are going to those in need, said Allyson Lewis, MFB development coordinator, and also a former FFA state officer and agriculture teacher in Ritchie County.

'One in five children in West Virginia is food insecure," Lewis noted. "Until you have a hand in changing it, it's just a statistic.'

The food is going to "backpack programs" in 30 or more elementary schools supported by MFB. The program provides students with food to take home when they might otherwise be forced to go hungry.

The project took four months to put together and yielded approximately 4,000 bags of food, each of which contains five meals' worth of food.

"This is one of the most awesome things I've ever done," said Morris, who noted that FFA was also involved in a separate project to collect donations for flood victims in West Virginia.

send food home with these students.

Even though Figgatt had the money and the trailer, finding someone to do the actual work turned out to be the hardest part of the job. An artist was hired to sculpt polystyrene foam to make the inside of the trailer look like a slice of earth. A year and a half later very little work had been done. With the Specialty Crop Block Grant deadline looming, Figgatt decided to take on the task herself with the help of a contractor.

"None of us had ever carved foam. None of us had ever done sculpting. We had to teach ourselves how to do it. It was trial by error. It wasn't an easy task but we learned as we went along."

The death of Figgatt's nephew in December of 2015 put the project on hold. But soon Figgatt discovered working on the soil trailer gave her an escape. Her brother began working alongside her, helping sculpt the soil landscape, the animals, bugs and plant life that inhabit the underground world. She named the turtle carved into the ceiling of the trailer Tyler in honor of her nephew.

"It was very therapeutic just being able to work on it, get it done and have a release for my grief," said Figgatt.

There was a lot of improvising along the way, like creating port holes where visitors could see an enlarged version of microbes that live underground. Figgatt wanted the appearance of looking into a microscope. The Robert C. Byrd Institute helped create those microbes with a 3-D printer. Finding something to cover the portholes posed a new challenge.

chapters throughout the state.

"I looked everywhere for convex acrylic domes and couldn't find them. I finally located some on a pet website. They're dog portholes for a privacy fence. They are perfect! The company custom made them to the size we needed.'

Figgatt added some florescent lights to highlight the micro-organisms to "make them come alive." She said it's the first thing that attracts children when they step into the trailer.

"Every inch of the walls is in 3-D and 4-D. It's a 'touch me' museum. One of the things that was important to me was to make it as life-like in texture as possible," she stressed Creatures like moles, worms and bugs are carved out of the walls. Carrots, beets and potatoes are part of the underground world as well. Written bits of information can be found next to them to explain how each impacts the soil. Figgatt estimated it's taken about 700 man hours to complete the project.

The Soil Tunnel Trailer was unveiled at the State Fair of West Virginia to what Figgatt called "a raging success." Children flocked to tour the trailer and touch all it's 3-D parts. The general description from the under-13 crowd, 'Cool!'

One of the first visitors was Commissioner of Agriculture Walt Helmick and his wife Rita.

"This is a truly unique learning experience. There's so much depth and detail in everything. It makes the soil come alive," said Helmick.

Mountain State Art & Craft Fair debuts its new 'Appalachian Experience' September 16-18

The Mountain State Art & Craft Fair, the annual West Virginia staple traditionally held in July, is moving to Sept. 16-18 at the Cedar Lakes Conference Center near Ripley.

'This year, we're looking to expand and reimagine a beloved West Virginia tradition," said Fair President Karen Facemyer. "We saw an opportunity to take advantage of the region's most beautiful season. Temperatures are cooler, and school is in session, allowing us the chance to involve hundreds of students and expose the next generation to Appalachian traditions."

The 53rd annual Fair is dubbed "An Appalachian Experience" and is an autumn celebration of art, food, music and culture. The Fair will explore West Virginia's rich heritage with areas highlighting Celtic, German, Italian, Swiss and early American influences. It also includes interactive artisan booths allowing guests to learn about stained glass, basket weaving, broom making and more.

Visitors will be immersed in the culture of each village, as they walk through the gate entrance and experience related interactive exhibits, arts, agriculture and food. Much loved Fair traditions like the quilt show will remain part of the Fair with quilts being on display 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., Sept. 16 and 17 and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept 18.

It's all about the kids on Friday, Sept. 16, 9 a.m.-1 p.m. when the Fair holds its Student Day. Special activities are planned for school groups, but no worries if you can't make it Friday, there are children's activities throughout all three days of the Fair.

So if you are visiting for the art, food, music or all of the above, the MSACF is sure to be a great Appalachian Experience for all. Visit msacf.com for more information.

Figgatt said that's what she was aiming for.

"I want children and adults to know when they walk in we're not just talking about dirt. There's life beneath the ground and without it we can't sustain our own lives!"

The trailer is still very much a work in progress. Figgatt is waiting on placards for all the plant and animal life, as well as hand rails for the wheelchair accessible ramps. The goal is to include everyone, even those who are differently abled.

The total cost of the trailer came in at just under $30,000. What isn't included in that figure is a full-time educator to travel with the trailer to schools, fairs and festivals. To book the trailer for an eight-hour visit will cost about $350. That covers the rental fee, fuel/mileage and educator pay.

"Teachers have told us schools don't have that kind of money. Now we know we need to get out there and procure donations for the trailer to set up scholarships that help offset the cost of renting the unit," said Figgatt. That's her next challenge.

For now, the Capitol Conservation District is focused on booking the soil trailer for events in and around Kanawha County. But a special trip to the West Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind is scheduled for October. The West Virginia Department of Agriculture is handling the transport of the trailer to and from Romney to make that possible.

For more information on the Soil Tunnel Trailer, log on to www.wvsoiltrailer.org/ or contact Aimee Figgatt at afiggatt@wvcawvca.onmicrosoft.com.

CICADA BANANA BREAD RECIPE

- cup shortening 1/2
- 3⁄4 cup sugar
- 2 ripe bananas, mashed
- 2 cups flour
- teaspoon soda 1
- teaspoon salt 1
- cup dry-roasted cicadas 1/2
- 1/4 cup chopped nuts

For bread: Mix together all ingredients. Bake in a greased loaf pan at 350°F for about 1 hour or until the bread tests done.

For cicadas: Newly hatched cicadas make the best eating because their shells have not yet hardened. Mature females are the next best thing. Adult males have fairly hollow abdomens, while the females are fat-filled. (Males have a rounded back end, females have pointed back ends). Collect in a paper or plastic bag early in the morning, just after they've emerged but before they've climbed out of reach.

Blanch in boiling water for 4-5 minutes. This solidifies their innards and gets rid of soil bacteria. Cook with them immediately or freeze them. Remove all hard parts (wings and legs) before using.

To dry-roast, place cicadas on a cookie sheet and roast for 10-15 minutes at 225 degrees. They should have a soft dry consistency, a bit like a nut. Roast longer, if still moist inside. When dry, grind coarsely and use as a nut substitute in baking or in ice cream topping

HOT BLACKBERRY JAM

- quart fresh or home canned wild 1 blackberries
- $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups sugar
- tablespoons flour or cornstarch 3

When using fresh blackberries, cook them with a little water until soft and juicy. The canned blackberries are already soft and can be used without additional cooking. Once the berries are soft, dissolve the flour or cornstarch in a little bit of water. Add a small amount of hot juice to the thickening mixture. Finally, stir the thickening mixture into the hot berries and cook until it is of soup consistency. Serve over buttered hot biscuits.

The idea for Nature Wonder Wild Foods Weekend began in 1967 when Edelene Wood was teaching an adult education class on wild foods for the Wood County School System. The class ended with a wild foods dinner. The theme for the dinner was based on a new book that had just come out by an upcoming wild foods author. Stalking the Wild Asparagus and Euell Gibbons were not yet household names. As Edelene continued to correspond with Euell she thought of having a wild foods weekend at North Bend State Park. The following year, on the third weekend of September 1968, the first Nature Wonder Weekend took place at North Bend State Park where Euell Gibbons agreed to be the featured speaker. No one at the gathering realized a tradition had begun that would last for decades. This year, Nature Wonder Weekend will be held September 16-18, and will mark the 49th year of the event.

CRAWFISH CORNBREAD

Don Gartman, Charleston, WV

- package Teays Valley Cornbread
 - mix (or your favorite cornbread recipe)
- $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups milk or buttermilk
- cups grated cheddar cheese $1\frac{1}{2}$
- 1
- 14-ounce can cream style corn
- jalapeno peppers finely chopped 2
- bell pepper finely chopped 1/2
- onion minced or grated 1
- 3/4 cup chopped green onions
 - pkg frozen crawfish tails (12-16 oz)

Preheat oven to 400-435°F.

Spray or grease an 8"x8" pan. Sauté onions and bell pepper in a small amount of butter until onions become transparent. Add jalapeno peppers; set aside. In large bowl combine combread mix with 11/2 cups milk or buttermilk. Stir creamed corn, cheddar cheese and green onions into cornbread mixture. Stir cooked onion and peppers into mixture. Stir in crawfish tails and pour into greased pan. Bake in preheated oven at 400°F for 35-45 minutes. Makes a meal by itself or serve with a side salad, Cajun beans & rice or chili.

CRAPPIE CHANTERELLE PATTIES

Bob Maslowski, Milton, WV

- 2 cups Crappie fillets, chopped
- cup frozen chopped chanterelles
- (2 cups fresh)
- 2 cups mashed potatoes
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 2 eggs
- cloves garlic 3
- tablespoons chopped chives 2

- tablespoons chopped parsley 2
- tablespoon fish sauce
- teaspoon Dickinson Kanawha Valley Salt Freshly ground pepper
 - Bread Crumbs Butter
- Olive Oil

Saute chopped onions in butter and olive oil until translucent. Add chanterelles and garlic; cook an additional 5 minutes or until mushrooms are done.

Add crappie, mashed potatoes and onion chanterelle mixture to medium bowl. Add salt, fish sauce, eggs, parsley, chives and ground pepper to bowl and mix well. Form patties and coat with bread crumbs. Fry patties in mixture of olive oil and butter. Remove to plate and serve.

BLACK WALNUT CRUSTED CRAPPIE W/ MAPLE BUTTER SAUCE

Susan Maslowski, Milton, WV

- 4 crappie filets
- 1⁄4 cup black walnuts, chopped fine
- cups crushed corn flakes 3/4
- egg, beaten 1
- Butter Sauce:
- 1/4 cup pure maple syrup
- cup butter
- Salt and pepper to taste

Mix black walnuts and corn flakes. Dip filets into beaten egg and then roll to coat with the black walnut mixture. Pan sauté in butter until done

Sauce: Bring syrup to a boil. Remove from heat and stir in butter. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve with fish filets.

This recipe for Black Walnut Pie won first place in the Wild Foods Dessert Competition at North Bend State Park.

BLACK WALNUT PIE

Susan Maslowski, Milton, WV

- $\frac{2}{3}$ cup sugar
- cup butter, melted 1/2
- 1⁄2 teaspoon salt
- cup dark corn syrup
- 3 eggs
 - 1 cup black walnuts
 - 9-inch unbaked piecrust

Preheat oven to 350°F. Beat together sugar, butter, salt, corn syrup and eggs. Stir in walnuts and pour into piecrust. Bake until filling is set and pastry is nicely browned, about 50 minutes. Cool and serve.

2016 Women in Agriculture

The WVDA recently honored its 2016 class of 'Women in Agriculture' during a ceremony at the State Fair of West Virginia. This was the seventh year for the program, which recognizes women agricultural leaders and their contributions to the industry. This year's honorees represented farmers, foresters and educators, who have all made great strides in their respective fields.

Barbara McWhorter - McWhorter has served as the NRCS State Forester since 1996 and has devoted her career to advocating for the conservation of natural resources, and specifically, for forest resources as a renewable resource. Her knowledge of conservation education, technology development/training and conservation programs has been passed on to thousands of landowners. Barbara developed the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQUIP) which has provided more than a million dollars of financial and technical assistance to hundreds of state woodlands. She was also the key developer of forestry skills materials used at the International Envirothon Competitions hosted in WV. In addition, she was a collaborator on the creation of the WV Forest Stewardship Partnership, which is dedicated to managing vegetation and soil on state and private lands. She also serves as an agency provided Adjunct Professor with WVU's Davis College of Agriculture, Natural Resources and Design. Barbara and her husband Ralph are parents to three sons, Tyler, Hunter and Bryce.

Charlotte Hoover – Hoover is a 6th generation farmer in Pendleton County where she owns and operates 390 acres as C and Double D Farm. Her operation consists of 40 cow/calf pairs, approximately 75 sheep and a few goats. While maintaining the livestock herds, Charlotte is conscientious of the environment. She has constructed a waste storage facility and a feeder barn. A natural trout stream running through the property has been fenced and improved with tree plantings and stream bank reinforcements. A rotational grazing schedule is also used to maintain pasture health. Access to two caves on the farm have been fenced to protect the endangered Virginia Big Ear Bat. In addition to the regular farming activities, Charlotte is instrumental in the Potomac Valley Partnership. She has served as Minority Advisor for the Pendleton County USDA Farm Service Agency and will serve as Chairperson for the next three years. Charlotte resides in Moyers, WV, with her fur babies, Suzy, Jessica and Fifty. She enjoys frequent visits from her daughter, Danielle and new granddaughter, Dani.

Donna Brooke-Alt -- At only 20 years old, Donna was faced with a difficult decision after her father's untimely death. With a passion for farming, she and her brother decided to continue Brookedale Holsteins, the dairy operation their father had started. When times became tough, she and her husband, Donnie, diversified by adding vegetables, a corn maze, and then greenhouses. Currently, Brookedale Farms consists of agritainment, greenhouses, cropping operation and most recently added, an event barn. Although Donna's brother has taken over the dairy operations with his son, she still has a vested interest and manages the books. In addition to staying busy on the farm, Donna is one of the first women directors for Farm Credit of the Virginia's board and has served in that position for the past 13 years. Donna resides in Fort Ashby with her husband, Donnie, and sons, Devon and Derek.

Vera Page - Page's love of agriculture began at three years old when her grandad would take her on horseback to salt the cattle on Sunday afternoons. It was a simple tradition that encouraged Vera to become a proponent for agriculture. Vera was the 4th generation to graduate from West Virginia University. While at WVU, Vera participated on the livestock judging team. Following graduation, she was the first female to be hired straight out of college to serve as a County Director for the Farm Service Agency. She served in that role for 34 years prior to her recent retirement. Currently, Vera, along with her family, own and operate a total of 2,004 acres. Their operation focuses on registered Angus cattle. Vera resides in Burlington with her husband Howard and daughters, Margaret and Sarah.
