

Walden F. Roush

As the offspring of farmer ancestors and raised on his family's farm, Walden Roush has always been imbued with a love and fascination for country life. Throughout his career as an educator and community development specialist, he continually counseled the youth of his community about their farming studies and endeavors, and assisted generations of 4-H Club members and Future Farmers of America, not only in agricultural technology, but in their character development as well. As he approached retirement, he realized the farm heritage of West Virginia would soon be lost as modern methods and equipments were installed, and the old farm implements molded and rusted away in barn lofts and country attics. He resolved to create a museum to preserve and house these artifacts. Located in Mason County, the West Virginia State Farm Museum continues to grow and attract more visitors each year. Roush administered the operation of the museum from its creation through 1990. He remains its Honorary Director.

Other community efforts he has undertaken included, the acquisition of a 114-acres farm which became the Mason County School Farm. This farm, one of the first school farms in the United States, serves as a land laboratory for vocational agricultural students and is still in operation. During 1947-1948, he taught an adult On-The-Farm Training Course. From 1937-1944 and again from 1959-1962, he was Superintendent of Mason County Schools. During his tenure, he built Mason County's outstanding vocational agriculture program. He has served on the Mason County Fair Board of Directors and as Vice-president and President. He was a member of the Gilmer County Agricultural Council during the late 1960s.
