West Virginia DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Funded by the Specialty Crop Block Grant Program, 23SCBPWV1220-00. Awarded by the United States Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Marketing Services

WELCOME!

West Virginians take a lot of pride in their heritage. Our farmers and producers are no exception – although they certainly are exceptional.

Developed in 1986, West Virginia Grown was designed to market West Virginia grown and made products to consumers. By placing the West Virginia Grown logo on a product, they are assuring buyers that product was grown or processed, with quality ingredients, in the Mountain State.

As local food continues to grow in popularity and consumers turn to healthier, fresher options, branding your products as local will be vital to increasing potential market opportunities. We believe this program is an important component to helping grow and diversify our economy, as well as expand our local food systems throughout West Virginia. Our mission is to convey to the consumer that when they buy a West Virginia Grown product they are putting dollars right back into the communities we live in.

The branding around this program is simple – West Virginians pride themselves on their heritage and culture. We always rally around one another and never shy away from supporting our great state. It's that same pride we have tried to emulate through our West Virginia Grown program.

Agriculture has rich roots in the Mountain State, and we believe it will play a vital role in our future.

Semper Fi,

Kent A. Leonhardt

West Virginia Commissioner of Agriculture

The West Virginia Grown Program

WHO WE ARE

Developed in 1986, West Virginia Grown was designed to market products made right here in the Mountain State to consumers. By purchasing a West Virginia Grown product, buyers are assured the item was grown or processed in West Virginia.

We, at the West Virginia Department of Agriculture believe this program is an important component to helping grow and diversify our economy, as well as expand our local food systems throughout the state.

As local food continues to grow in popularity and consumers turn to healthier, fresher options, the West Virginia Grown program is essential to fostering growth within our own agribusinesses. By choosing a West Virginia Grown product, you are echoing that notion and highlighting agriculture's rich roots in the Mountain State and vital role in our future.

OUR MISSION

Our mission is to convey to the consumer that when they buy a West Virginia Grown product, they are buying a high-quality item and putting dollars right back into their local communities.

Appalachian Tradition

It's all about preserving the past at Appalachian Tradition. Samantha McBride has been canning and preserving fruits since she was a little girl. "It is something I love to do. Canning is becoming a lost art, and I hope to pass it along to my children." She makes fruit preserves, jams, jellies and butters from local produce, with no artificial additives, colors or dyes.

Arbaugh Farms

Julian Arbaugh bought an antique grist mill 15 years ago. But it wasn't until 2019 that he started growing and grinding an heirloom corn called Bloody Butcher that Arbaugh Farm got down to business. "I am interested in niche products that have a cultural tie to the Appalachians, I produce all my products here on the farm." That includes sorghum syrup in a large, open kettle. He also raises grass-fed beef.

Daniels Maple Syrup

The Daniels family has been producing maple syrup in West Virginia for 30 years. The business is a labor of love for Brandon and Janelle. They even have their kids learning the ropes to carry on the family tradition. The operation is spread over eight pieces of property, and they have 2,500 taps. Brandon says it can take up to 70 gallons of sweet water to make just one gallon of pure, maple syrup.
