Appalachian Greens

Appalachian Greens is a microgreens and shoots producer that has been delivering farm-fresh products since 2020. The company uses simple growing principles, cultivating their greens with only clean soil, pure water, and premium seed without pesticides or hidden ingredients. By combining small-batch quality standards with commercial-tier production frameworks, they bridge the gap between mass-produced greens and inconsistent backyard farm output. Appalachian Greens offers their nutrient-dense, flavorful products in both retail and wholesale sizes year-round to a limited customer base. USDA-GAP Certified.

Appalachian Orchard Company

Located in Almost Heaven, West Virginia, apples are grown and packed by both third and fourth-generation family members. The Orr family began its journey raising fruits and vegetables in the 1930s. Four subsequent generations have continued to plant orchards in the scenic Blue Ridge Mountains in the area known as Apple Pie Ridge. In the 75+ years that the Orr Family has been growing, packing, and marketing fruit, each generation continues to move forward, embracing technology while holding onto its deep-rooted heritage. In June of 2022, they were honored to place 354 acres of orchard into the Farmland Protection Programs to ensure it will remain in farmland for generations to come!

Country Family Farms

Heather and Kerby have heard folks talk about their family farm for over 150 years. They love providing food and support in the local community. The farm is U-pick style and embodies the phrase "farm-to-table". The produce used in sauces and preserves gets hand-picked in the field and is prepared in a kitchen built by the family. Walking through the rows of the U-pick field or stopping by their stand, you get an authentic farm experience.

Devil's Due Distillery

At Devil's Due Distillery, they mash and ferment grains utilizing local products, distill them weekly, and bottle them. Their name is a play on the term "Angel's Share". Angel's share is when whiskey gets aged in a barrel, about 3-5% evaporates every year that it ages. The old timers used to say that the angels were coming down to drink it, so what's left in the barrel is referred to as the "Devil's Due". They are open seven days a week and host private events and parties.

Good Time Ridge Farm

Harold and Cheri Seiler purchased 10 acres of land in West Virginia in 1986 as a retirement investment. Cheri fell in love with an alpaca she met at a local farm in 2008, and the rest is history. Nearly three decades later, they raise alpacas as well as Highland cattle, Kiko meat goats and miniature silky fainting goats. "The feeling of peace when working with the animals and all their different personalities is amazing," says Cheri.

Indian Water Maple Company

Indian Water Maple Company started as a hobby. In 1987, Ed and Karen Hartman made about one gallon of maple syrup on their kitchen stove. The next year they used a homemade, flat bottom pan to make 40-gallon. The next summer, they built their own sugar camp and purchased a real evaporator and installed a gravity fed tubing system. Many changes have taken place since to make the operation more efficient, but the company is still family-owned with sons Harman, Bowie and Kaleb joining the operation.

Powder Keg Farms

Powder Keg Farms was born out of the passion for growing nutritious food. Owner and gardener-in-chief Gini LaMaster uses techniques she learned from her grandmother. The produce that comes from the farm is not only good for people but good for the earth. Powder Keg Farms grows vegetables, herbs and fruit and there's also free-range chicken and eggs. What's special is the hand-tending and loving care they receive, along with practices that allow the farm to avoid using harmful chemicals.

R & A Honeybees

Not all honey is created equal. The folks at R & A Honeybees collect their honey from 200 hives spread over Preston and Tucker Counties. They strategically locate their hives to take advantage of specific pollen flowers (Locust, Poplar, Sourwood, Knotweed and Goldenrod, to name a few). It then goes into a cold extractor, making it raw and unfiltered honey.

The West Virginia Farmers Market Association (WVFMA) is a statewide membership-based organization designed to strengthen farmers markets and enhance their surrounding communities. The WVFMA provides resources and technical assistance to farmers markets through our website and other communication channels. The WVFMA works with various partners across the state to provide farmers markets with relatable and relevant resources to address their needs.

The West Virginia Farmers Market Association (WVFMA) is honored to offer free membership to members of the West Virginia Department of Agriculture's Veterans and Heroes Program. This complimentary membership, courtesy of the West Virginia Department of Agriculture, provides access to a host of benefits at no cost.

Members enjoy discounted rentals of our three poultry processing trailers, membership packets funded by the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation, eligibility for our Mini-Grant program, personalized one-on-one support, membership to the Farmers Market Coalition, and more!

In 2007, a group of farmers and farm advocates were awarded a grant through the West Virginia Department of Agriculture. Initial guidance for the group was provided by the WVU Extension Service and Davis College of Agriculture, Forestry and Consumer Sciences. Since inception, the WVFMA has been committed to strengthening the viability of farmers markets across West Virginia.

Over time the WVFMA grew to include more than 60 farmers markets across the state. In 2012, the WVFMA began a system of analytical data collection known as the annual West Virginia Farmers Market Census. This census exposed a critical need for a standardized data collection system for all farmers markets in West Virginia. The WVFMA developed the data collection toolkit to assist markets with the task. Free Membership for Veterans and Heroes Program Participants
